

When the Flyin' Penguin Detective Agency, located in San Rafael, California, was hired to tail a woman twenty-four hours a day, they thought it was another simple marital relations case.

Penn Gwinn and his partner PZ soon realized the Philippine national who hired them was not a rejected husband, but more likely an agent of the Philippine government. It didn't take long for them to notice how much this case seemed to be related to one of their existing cases.

From hair raising car chases in San Francisco to the troubled political center of Manila, Penn and PZ find themselves chasing the dragon. They discover a trail of drug smuggling, murder and intrigue reaching the highest offices of the Philippine government. Knowing this, will they get out alive?

Drugs, greed and government intrigue;
some things never change.

Even before the first car chase I said, "Jeez, I'm reading a movie here!" This work from H.R. Miller pulls you in quick. Feel for the good guys - despise the bad. Just one problem... it's only that simple in the movies.

The Philippine Chase is an enjoyable and action filled peek into the life of an international private investigator. I look forward to reading the next installment of the Penn Gwinn series!
